This astonishing assertion comes from a scientist, who from the safe distance of Germany declares that among women in general, and—quoting an American medical man as his authority—American women in particular, the growth of the mustache is on the increase.

His theory has set some commentators to predicting that the "bearded lady" will eventually become the feminine type, others to quareling over whether the fact proves that the race is degenerating or improving, since it is a moote question whether abnormal growth of hair is a sign of physical superiority or the reverse.

WHAT THE DOCTORS SAY. WHAT THE DOCTORS SAY.

"Is it really true that mustached women are growing in numbers, and if so, why?"

A physician who is something of an authority on enthology and nutropology had been hunted up and these questions put to him. The first he admitted to be something of apuzzier. "Thesethings are all a matter of historical comparison, and since I know of no particular data in record to the growth of haif on women's gord to the growth of haif on women's face's, how can I, or that German scien-tist, or any one else, confidently say that common than in the past? Did its Work Well.
(Orange Observer)

The State Democrate Convention did its work faithfully and well. O'Ferrall was our choice for Governor, and we had predicted his nomination on the first ballot, and it came true. Maj. Kent adds great strength to the ticket, being a representative farmer of the great Southwest. R. Taylor Scott is the present Attorney-General, and the State never had a better. No good citizen can afford to waver in his support of such a sterling ticket. It must be elected by a mastodonic majority—and it will be.

The nomination of O'Ferrail, Kent and Tyler cannot fail to give satisfaction to the great majority of the people of Virginia, and the probability is that they will be elected by an unprecedented majority. They are able and safe men, and will discharge their respective duties with credit to themselves and to the satisfaction of the people. The platform, in the tion of the people. The platform, in the main, is a good one. The only objection that can be urged against it is the meek that can be urged against it is the meek manner in which it deals with the all absorbing currency question now agitating the country from one end to the other. Time was, when Virginia, by her wisdom and assertiveness, exercised a controlling influence in shaping the policy of the government. Shorn of a large share of her territory, and otherwise handicapped, she does not now wield the influence she once did, but as a co-equal State of the Union and the leading State of the great South, she should still have State of the Union and the leading State of the great South, she should still have the courage of her convictions and declare in unequivocal terms her position on all great questions. That a vast majority of the people of Virginia are bimetalists, and are in full accord with the Chicago platform on that question, cannot be doubted. Because Mr Cleveland has seen fit to take a position in opposition to the party that elected him, can has seen fit to take a position in opposition to the party that elected him, can hardly afford justification for the renunciation of the pledges of the party by a great Democratic State. We say renunciation, because, while the platform adopted at Richmond does not declare account himstalliam his endorsement of ariance with the qolicy that he is

The State Democratic Convention was a splendid body of Virginians and its work was done in a day and well done too, no doubt as to the composition of the ticket as well as the platform, while we hoped to see Maj. Tyler at the head of the ticket yet any close observer was forced to concede that O'Ferrail's nomination was a foregone conclusion.

The platform is excellent and comes ou boldly for an income tax and reaffirm the Chicago plank for a gold and silver standard. That the ticket will be elected there is no doubt and it behooves every Democrat to work for its success.
